Applying for NBRC Examinations

• Once the admission requirements are met, there are two ways to apply for an examination:
  - Online at nbrc.org
  - OR
  - Download and print the application form at nbrc.org

• Once an application is approved, scheduling an examination is easy through our testing agency, PSI. You may schedule online at goAMP.com or call 888.519.9901.

Eligibility Three-Year Time Limit

• Graduates of accredited advanced-level education programs have three years after graduation to earn the RRT credential.

• Individuals who don’t earn the RRT credential within this time limit will be required to retake and pass the Therapist Multiple-Choice Examination at the high cut score to regain eligibility for the Clinical Simulation Examination.

Difference Between NBRC & State Licensure Agencies

• NBRC awards credentials based on test performance that all 49 states recognize as standards for state licensure.

• State licensure agencies grant a license to practice in the state.

• Continuing Education information submitted to NBRC is not shared with state licensing agencies and vice versa.

Credential Verification

• A credential verification letter confirms information on currently held credentials and is accepted by most state licensure agencies as official verification of credentials. This is not automatically sent and must be requested.

• At nbrc.org, an online request can be made or information needed to submit a written request by mail can be obtained.

Understanding What the Cut Score Means

• Both the TMC and PFT Examinations have a low cut score and a high cut score.

• For the TMC Examination, the low cut score earns the CRT credential. If the high cut score is achieved, you become eligible to take the CSE, which if taken and passed within the required time limit, earns you the RRT credential.

• For the PFT Examination, the low cut score earns the CPFT credential and the high cut score earns the RPFT credential.
